the CAMERA!

"HEY, fellas!" yelled Frankie as he ran up to the gang sitting on the curbstone. "Look what I got for my birthday!"

Not one of the gang even bothered to look up to see what Frankie's birthday present was. They all sat there, their chins cupped in their hands, looking very sad indeed.

"Hey, fellas," Frankie repeated. "Didn't you hear me? Look what I've got."

Specs raised his head and slowly looked up at Frankie and his present.

"A camera!" Specs suddenly came to life. "A real camera, fellas. Frankie's got a camera."

But the rest of the boys didn't even move. Finally Slim managed to say, "So Frankie's got a camera. So what? That doesn't get us the new football we need."

"Oh, yes, it does," Specs answered.

"How?" Slim asked.

"We can make enough money for a football by taking pictures with that camera and selling them!"

Now the gang was interested. They gathered around Frankie, patting him on the back and admiring his new camera.

"Good ol' Frankie," Slim said. "Always comes through in a pinch!"

Frankie smiled. "Aw, gee, fellas, it's nothin'. It's just a birthday present. All I had to do to get it was to be born."

"Do you know how to work the camera?" Specs asked Frankie.

"Of course I do."

"How?" the gang asked all at the same time.

"Well," Frankie held out the camera and scratched his head. "First you take this thingumadoodle and move it right next to this little red dohinkus. Then you look into this square thingemajig and press this dojigger. After that you turn this dohinkey and the picture is took."

"Huh?" Slim asked, completely confused.

"Well," Frankie started again, "you take this thingumadoodle and . . ."

"Okay, okay," Slim interrupted. "I believe you."

"Let's get started then," Specs suggested. "Whose picture do we take first?"

"Here comes a lady with a baby carriage," Slim pointed down the street. "Let's ask her if we can take a picture of her baby."

The gang dashed up to the woman like a herd of wild horses.

"Good day, Madame," Specs said in his best manner. "Would you like to have your darling baby photographed . . . for a slight fee, of course."

"No, I guess not. You see..."

"Tut, tut," Specs continued, "we do very fine work. The famous Frankie Fuddle is our photographer."

"Yes," Frankie agreed. "All I do is press this thingumadoodle and . . ."

Slim put his hand over Frankie's mouth. "Sh-h-h-h, Frankie. Let Specs do the talking."

"But you don't understand," the lady started to say.

"Let us see the darling child," Specs said as he pushed back the top of the carriage.

"Groceries!" the gang yelled together.

"I tried to tell you that," the woman said, slamming down the top of her carriage.

That disappointment didn't stop the gang. They rang doorbells, stopped people on the streets, went into department stores, supermarkets and manholes. Frankie snapped pictures of babies, women, men, cats, and dogs.

"Let's quit," Slim said. "We've taken enough pictures to buy a dozen footballs. Tomorrow we'll deliver the pictures and collect the money."

"Who's going to develop the film?" asked Specs.

"I'll do it," Frankie said. "A developing set came with the camera."

"Do you know how?" Slim asked.

"Sure! First I press the thingumadoodle, then . . ."

"Okay, okay," Slim yelled out, "you win! Go ahead and develop 'em."

The next day the gang rang Frankie's doorbell bright and early.

"How'd the pictures turn out, Frankie?" the gang asked when the great photographer came to the door.

Frankie shook his head sadly.

"You forgot to put film in the camera?" Slim roared.

"No, I put film in, but it all came out black!" Frankie held up the roll of dark film.

"You must've done something wrong," Slim said.

"Impossible," Frankie replied. "I turned all the bright lamps on when I was developing so that I could see what I was doing and make sure I wouldn't make any mistakes."

USE YOUR HEAD

"FRANKIE FUDDLE is not a coward," May said angrily, as she stamped her foot on the sidewalk.

"Then why is he hiding behind your skirt?" asked Tubby.

Frankie peeked out from behind May and said, "Because it's nice and shady here."

"Come on out here and fight like a man," Tubby demanded.

"Okay," said Frankie, "when I grow up to be a man, I'll come out and fight."

"Aw, you're not only a coward, Frankie," said Tubby, disgustedly, "but you're, also, a dumbell. You never use your head."

"He does too," May said. "When he wears a hat."

"I'll get you, Frankie, when May isn't around to protect you," Tubby said, as he walked away.

"Is he gone?" Frankie asked May.

"Yes, Frankie, he's gone. You can come out of the shade now."

"He was afraid of ME!"

"Come on, Frankie, let's go over to Pop's Candy Shop," May said.

Frankie and May took some of their special shortcuts across a creek, through the city dump, over a half dozen fences and soon they were in Pops' Candy Shop.

"Hello, May! Hello, Frankie," Pop greeted them.

Frankie and May said hello and sat down.

"What's on your mind, May?" Pop asked.

"Aw, Tubby called Frankie a coward, and he said Frankie doesn't use his head," May said.

"Reach for the ceiling," a rusty voice commanded.

Pop and May wheeled around and looked right into a gun barrel. Frankie was on top of the table standing on his tip toes.

"What are you doing, bub?" the man with the heavy voice demanded.

"You told us to reach for the ceiling," Frankie said, as he kept jumping up trying to touch the ceiling. "But it's too high."

"Oh, a wise guy, huh?"

"See," said May, "he thinks you're clever, Frankie."

"Who are you?" Pop asked the man in a trembling voice.

"This is a stick-up. I want all your dough!"

Pop walked over to the cash register and opened it. He took out a handful of money and handed it to the crook.

"That's more like it. Now I'm gonna scram an' I don't want even a little peep outta any of you," the crook warned, as he stuffed the money into his pocket.

Frankie was still jumping up and down on the table trying to reach the ceiling. Suddenly, Frankie slipped and sailed through the air like a shot out of a cannon. His head slammed into the crook's stomach and sent the man crashing into one of the counters.

The crook hit the counter with such a bang that the cash register came tumbling down and slammed the thief right on the top of the head. He was knocked out cold as the register opened and rang up, NO SALE.

When the law arrived, the Captain looked at the crook and said, "This is Spike the Slicker, one of the toughest mugs in the underworld. The smartest detectives in the world have been unable to catch Spike. It took a brilliant man . . . a man with real brains. . . . to catch him."

The police Captain looked at Frankie. "There's a hundred dollars reward for Spike, and it's all yours, young man."

The police carried the thief out to the police van.

May turned to Frankie and tapped him on the shoulder. "Brains or no brains, Frankie, you certainly used your head that time!"

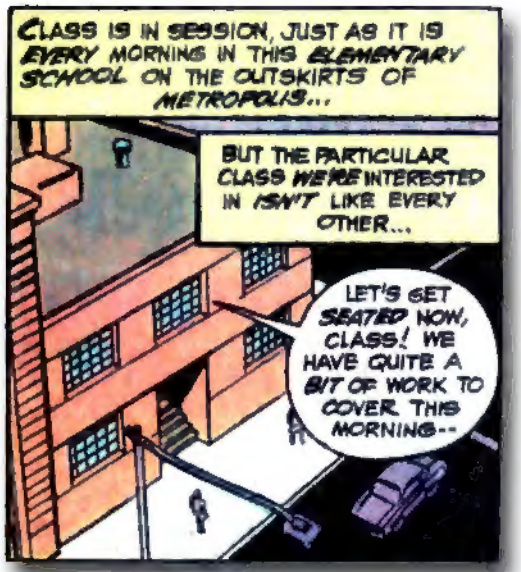
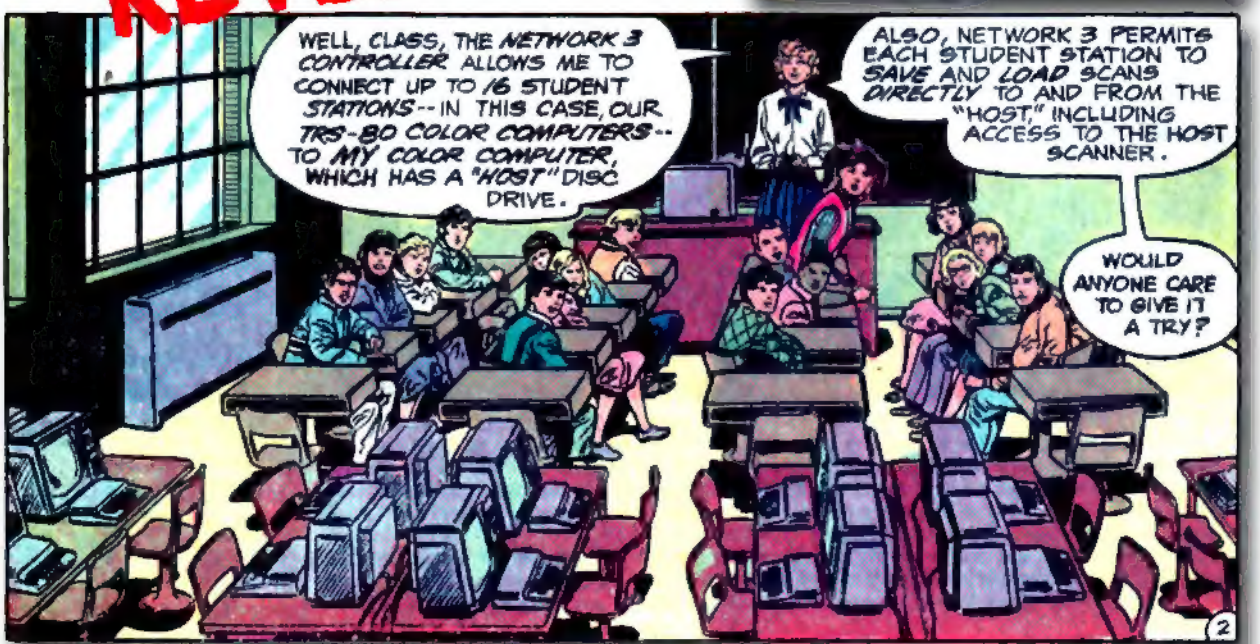
SECRETS of the PMACK SCANNING EMPIRE REVEALED



CLASS IS IN SESSION, JUST AS IT IS EVERY MORNING IN THIS ELEMENTARY SCHOOL ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF METROPOLIS...
BUT THE PARTICULAR CLASS WE'RE INTERESTED IN ISN'T LIKE EVERY OTHER...
LET'S GET SEATED NOW, CLASS! WE HAVE QUITE A BIT OF WORK TO COVER THIS MORNING--



WELL, CLASS, THE NETWORK 3 CONTROLLER ALLOWS ME TO CONNECT UP TO 16 STUDENT STATIONS -- IN THIS CASE, OUR TRS-80 COLOR COMPUTERS -- TO MY COLOR COMPUTER, WHICH HAS A "HOST" DISC DRIVE.
ALSO, NETWORK 3 PERMITS EACH STUDENT STATION TO SAVE AND LOAD SCANS DIRECTLY TO AND FROM THE "HOST," INCLUDING ACCESS TO THE HOST SCANNER.
WOULD ANYONE CARE TO GIVE IT A TRY?

ALL RIGHT, LET'S SWITCH ON OUR COMPUTERS AND GET STARTED.
AND SO, FOR THE NEXT HOUR, THERE IS SILENCE IN THE CLASS-ROOM AS THE SIXTH-GRADERS APPLY THEMSELVES TO THE TASK AT HAND--
